GREAT THROG WITNESSES PRESENTATION OF DEGREES

Kinsell and Feldmen are Student Orators

THE annual commencement of the George Washington University was especially brilliant this year. To the music of the Marine Band, preceded by the Faculty and Trustees of the University, a long line of eager students entered the Memorial Continental Hall at 8 o'clock under the gaze of hundreds of admirers and friends. After prayer by the Rev. Charles Wood, the student orators of the Department of Arts and Sciences and the Department of Law delivered their addresses. Rex Emir Kinsell, for the Department of Arts and Sciences, had as the subject of his oration "Our Equipment." He spoke of what the College course means to a man and what he ought to do with it. Mr. Peter Royal Feldman for the Law Department, made a profound impression upon the large audience in an address setting forth the differences between the law of yesterday and today. He spoke of the changing conditions and of the need of change in legal procedure.

After the speeches, the degrees were presented to the undergraduates by the deans of the various departments. The Honorary Degrees were presented by Admiral Stockton, the President of the University. After an address to the graduating classes by the President of the University, the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Wood.

The total list of graduates was as follows:

SENIOR PLAY REVIVED

College Men Make Sport of Faculty

THE latest of the student activities which "came back" this year to G. W. U. was the Senior Play. To the Class of '13, Columbian College, belongs the credit of reviving this annual frolic that was in former years such a feature of graduation week. The class witnessed as freshmen the last performance of the Senior Play in 1910, and as Seniors caused it to be revived.

By all tradition the Senior Play is the one occasion on which the students may "get back" at the Faculty. This license is permitted before graduation. Accordingly, in the Senior Play the graduates take occasion to hold up to innocent chaff the various foibles of the Faculty that remain in memory and in after years serve to endear them to the Alumni. Prominent students, too, and representative student activities come in for their share of the good-natured chaff.

The play this year is the joint work of a committee consisting of Arthur H. Redfield, Morris A. Pozen, and Katherine Kerby. The collaboration had to labor against all the difficulties of a new enterprise, for the Senior Play was virtually revived in toto. In rehearsing, too, there was the further difficulty of lack of time, for the examinations were held several days later than was expected. Nevertheless, the play may be pronounced an unqualified success.

"The Rehearsal" was the title of the piece. The audience was given a glimpse of a supposed rehearsal of the G. W. U. Dramatic Club. Kemble Irving Hennessy, the breezy coach of the club, had to rehearse them under difficulties, for all the principals were missing, and he had to give their parts to the chorus. The rehearsal went on in a fragmentary but lively way.

The first scene of the play that was supposed to be rehearsed by the club was the front of the college building. There some of the embarrassments of the coy coeds were vividly portrayed, particularly the conjunction of the steps and the stares. From their difficulties, however, they were rescued by the gallant Gerald Bleats, who gave the wicked mashers a lesson and exemplified it in a strikingly characteristic way.

The counsels of the Faculty were

1913 CHERRY TREE FINALLY APPEARS

Staff of the Annual Publication Deserves Congratulations

THE Cherry Tree has at last made its appearance. We can well pardon the delay in view of the excellent work which has been done. This year's publication is far in advance of those of recent years and forms an interesting memento of one's college life. No one should be without this well written and charmingly arranged record of the College year.

Of course there are minor mistakes here and there, but that is but the result of unforeseeable accident and not because of any fault on the part of the compilers of the annual. The work differs from that of previous years in that it contains many spicy knocks and jokes of real merit in addition to everything else usual in books of its kind. It is evident that the management has spared no expense. The binding is of leather and the paper of good quality. The cuts are on the whole clear and distinct. It is a thing well worth while having and all students who have not as yet subscribed had better put in orders immediately as the number is limited.

Convict Has Apparatus to Photograph Aura

CONVICT No. 8486, in Leavenworth prison, has completed an apparatus to photograph the human aura, a sort of atmosphere that surrounds the body. This announcement from the prison is interesting scientists in connection with the recent discoveries of women who claimed to have seen human souls depart in material shapes.

Prof. Ruediger, of George Washington University, declares that the human soul cannot take a material shape, but the human aura has been seen.

The convict's invention consists of a set of delicate screens which give the aura in various colors. The convict has discovered that the more intellectual a person is, the more powerful are the auratic waves.

These waves, he believes, are transmitted through the ether with lightning speed, probably like thought. He believes that in time physicians will be able to use the

University Congress To Open

ALL members of the University are invited to attend the sessions of The George Washington University Congress this summer. The opening session will be held in the Auditorium of the Law School in the New Masonic Temple on Monday evening, June 16th, at eight o'clock sharp.

The congress will meet weekly throughout the vacation and it is hoped that everyone who will spend either a part or the entire summer will take advantage of this opportunity to verse themselves in the questions that are before the people today and at the same time becoming proficient in public speaking.

Political Science Courses Still Given

THE abandonment of the College of Political Sciences as a separate institution, though a much regretted step was a necessary one. Realizing the worth of the courses and the benefit to be derived from them, the Faculty has retained them, giving them now in the Columbian College. With one or two minor exceptions, the curriculum is exactly the same and those persons wishing to pursue the courses leading to the Consular and Diplomatic Service of the United States may do so as before. The only change, practically speaking, is the abandonment of the name. The work still continues.

likewise revealed. Under the lead of President Shotgun, impersonated by the German janitor, A. Gustav Windt, the profs sagely debated whether "more science or less art" should be put in the curriculum. The cause of art was warmly championed by Hin Wilbuzz, Prof. G. Nearly French, and Prof. Kitchen Barrel, while science was advocated no less fervently by Dr. Howe I. Dödgem, and Dr. C. Explosive Runmoe. Their debate was interrupted unfortunately by the arrival of Dr. Arterio Scleroids of the Health Department, who informed the cast that they might give their performance in the quarantine hospital, as small-pox had been discovered in their number.

The parts were well taken. M. A. Pozen shone as the breezy coach, K. I. Hennessy and L. Lodholz brought down the house by his vivid impersonation of Prof. G. Nearly French. The part of A. Gustav Windt, the German janitor, who plays president of the university, left vacant by the sudden illness of Henry A. Lepper, was well taken by C. C. Houghton. A. H. Redfield played the gallant editor, Gerald Bleats.

A feature of "The Rehearsal" was the songs, which were largely original in both words and air. Miss Ulrickson's voice soared in "Dreaming" and "I Don't Mind the Steps but the Stars," Miss McCabe sang "Brother William" and "Physics." A sextet of coeds sang effectively, "Sorority Lunch." M. A. Pozen's dancing was well received, especially to the "Chemical Laboratory Rag." "You Mustn't Stare at a Girl" was rendered by A. H. Redfield in the character of Gerald Bleats.

Concerning the Play

THE HATCHET viewed with pleasure the revival of the Senior Play of the Department of Arts and Sciences. It is a good thing to have some medium through which the Faculty may discover just what the students think of them. President Needham used to say that his associates in the administration were always improved after each Senior Play. The farce this year was cleverly written and well arranged. If it lacked in anything, it was in the criticism of the authorities. In matters of that sort, where everything is done in a spirit of sport the student should have full reign and vent his four years pent-up feelings as strongly as he pleases.

Come Across!

WILL you force THE HATCHET to go the route of the other student interests? Do you realize that you have signed a contract which ought to be binding? Do you know that delay is injurious to your reputation and credit? Do you stop to think that if you don't pay your HATCHET subscription you will force THE HATCHET to be buried, perhaps, forever? For your own sake and ours, come across with that one twenty-five.

Grads Lack Enthusiasm

In the Alumni and student functions held this year there were in almost every instance older men than is usually found at such affairs. There was a very evident lack of the recent graduates. It has been suggested that this is due to the fact that there has been very little happening within the University of recent years to draw the students together and make for a strong alumni. Without an alumni's support, it is very difficult for any institution to prosper. Pleasant incidents in college life are what make for a strong and loyal spirit on the part of the alumni. Unless there are many occasions on which men and women may meet, and meet in a friendly and happy spirit, it is scarcely possible that there will be many incidents to remember except the interesting, but none the less dry classroom and the journey to and from school. Football games and other such amusements are what make for good fellowship by providing a common meeting ground where men may assemble in a spirit of good-fellowship. This is one of the reasons why the teams of the various Universities are regarded as among the valuable assets of those institutions. It is to be hoped that the students of this University will make an effort to meet one another either on the athletic field, at the college dances, or other entertainments.

Debater Answered

For THE UNIVERSITY HATCHET:

THE protest of a "debater" in the last issue of THE HATCHET calls for a few words in justification of the action of the members of the Needham and Columbian Debating Societies on account of the recent "merger."

In the first place, it is not contemplated that the "merger" shall be permanent. In the second place, while it is true as the "debater" states that the "existence of the two rival societies has always done much to create and sustain interest in debating," at the same time it must be borne in mind that no society can continue without active members and regular attendance, which is indispensable to the success of any society. The fundamental reason why it became necessary to merger was due to the "debater" himself and students of his type. Those who seldom, if ever, attend any of the meetings of the societies are the ones who are primarily responsible for the "merger," and not the few who have always been regular in their attendance and vitally interested in the promotion of debating in the University. In short, we were brought face to face with this fact—that the poor attendance of the societies made it necessary to do something and the solution of the problem was a "merger."

In regard to dispensing with the Annual Prize Debate, it should be noted that the work involved in the selection of men to participate in such a debate, brought about by intersociety debates, has always devolved upon two or three men. This was not only true in the two intersociety debates held this year but was also true in the recent intercollegiate debate in which case the major part of the work devolved upon two men. The "best way to kill debating in the University," therefore, is not "to continue to deny its adherents something about which to cluster their interest," but rather the continuance of inactivity on the part of the "debater" and others who take little interest in advancing debating in the University.

Standards of Purity for Food Products

Sec. 5, pp. f. ICE CREAMS.

1. Ice Cream is a frozen product made from cream and sugar, with or without a natural flavoring, and contains not less than fourteen (14) per cent milk fat.

2. Fruit Ice Cream is a frozen product made from cream, sugar and sound, clean natural fruits, and contains not less than twelve (12) per cent of milk fat.

3. Nut Ice Cream is a frozen product made from cream, sugar and sound, non-rancid nuts, and contains not less than twelve (12) per cent of milk fat.

It is apparent that the above definition and extract from the U. S. Pure Food Laws maintains a high standard of nutritive value for Ice Cream.

Although this standard was not upheld by the courts, we believe in it, and believe that people should know what they are paying for, and, although it costs more than a poorer grade, we guarantee our goods to conform to these lacteal requirements.

Therefore, our customers get what they pay for—rich, nutritive and digestible Ice Cream.

Student Wants Football

WHAT has become of all the enthusiasm regarding the resumption of athletics that was apparent a few weeks ago among the students of the University? Are we going to allow another year to pass before putting a football team in the field? If anything is to be done in this matter it must be done quickly.

There is a phase of the athletic question that seems to have been lost sight of in the general discussion, and that is the relation of athletics to the standing of the University. While I do not care to enter into an argument as to the justice of the same, it remains a fact that a university having a first-class football team, and having a creditable reputation in other lines of athletic endeavor, such as track, basket-ball, etc., has a higher standing with the general public than does the institution that has no athletics. The field of advertising open for an institution of higher learning necessarily is somewhat restricted, and no better field exists to advertise a university than that of athletics. The value of all advertising lies in its power of attracting prospective customers and thereby increasing sales. A university is, to a certain extent, a commercial organization, seeking to sell to a portion of the public a commodity called "higher education." The question arises, therefore, of advertising in such a manner as will be calculated best to attract and interest the group of the general public from which is recruited the customers of the university, who are the students, and this group is found largely in the local high and preparatory schools in the neighborhood of the university. The George Washington University should count among its student body a large proportion of the graduates of the District high schools and the several preparatory schools located in Washington; and what is more attractive to the average young man and woman than athletics? Can we blame the young man who has been active in the athletic endeavors of his high school if, when the question of the selection of his university is discussed, he desires to attend an institution whose eleven is featured in the Sunday supplements?

There is another aspect to the question of athletics that affects all of us to a still greater extent. Many of us are soon to become the possessors of a diploma (at least many of us have hopes), certifying to the world at large that we have completed a course of studies. Now this diploma has, in addition to its purely personal value, a commercial value also; and this latter value is measured largely by the extent to which the University granting the diploma is known to, and the esteem in which the institution is held by, the general public. There are but a few ways in which an institution of higher learning can bring itself to the attention of the public, the two principal ways being by means of the ability shown by its graduates as evidenced by the prominence to which they attain in after life; and by the victories of its representatives on the athletic field. Thus it may be argued that the student body, in supporting the athletics of the University, are simply doing something that adds value to their diploma; in other words, they "are casting their bread upon the waters" with the sure knowledge that some of it, at least, will return to them in the form of actual dollars and cents.

These arguments in favor of the resumption of athletics are submitted in addition to those already made in the past through the columns of your paper in the hope that they will aid in bringing to the student body a realization of the obligation that rests upon every student, male and co-ed, to put his shoulders to the wheel and work until the athletic debt is but a nightmare of the past. Let us think of the great benefits that will accrue from a little work done by each of us, and then let us cooperate heartily when the next theater benefit is announced, which I hope will be right after the commence-

Bills of the Play

Song. (By Co-ed)

I don't mind the dance, but the partners,
I don't mind the cars, but the fares,
I don't mind the Trig.
It's not so big,
But it's the awful after Math that makes me worry.
I don't mind the frat, but the rushing,
My study's the less of my cares.
I don't mind the French, but the Henning,
I don't mind the steps, but the stares.

I don't mind the Chem, but the quizzes,
I don't mind the lab, but the smells,
I don't mind the History
To me it's no mystery,
But it's the outside reading work that gets my nanny.
I don't mind our dear little frat room;
The climbing's the least of my cares.
I don't mind the Dutch, but the Schoenfeld.
I don't mind the steps, but the stares.

Smashit Editor to Gang at steps:
Don't make a co-ed coming up stairs think she's in a suffrage parade under the protection of Sylvester.

Can Maxon get off Scott free?

You may talk of two at a table
Or dining with any old bunch,
But a snac with the girls is the dearest—
Our little sorority lunch.

The Frat Goat (Tune: Snooky-ookums)

All day long they call him Brother William, Brother William.
He must wait on all the frat house;
It's "fetch my slippers, neophyte Freshie get my pipe alight."
That's the way they make him run.
Always must he enter by the basement, by the basement
Always wear a crimson tie, purple socks, yellow shoes, funny hat.
Girls, if you admire your beau,
Like to see him look just so,
Don't you ever let him—join a frat!

Some music produces emotion, other music produces motion. Rag-time belongs to the latter class. It is a more or less musical composition which excites the human motor system. When the strain of a good rag strikes a susceptible subject, every molecule of that person changes its rate of vibration and does a turkey trot. That's what a rag is.

FRESHMAN LAW NOTES

SINCE this is our last appearance as Freshman, we feel justified in giving vent to our feelings. For a whole year have we been forced to remain in utmost discomfort during the greater part of the lectures, owing to the extremely hard and close seats in the Law School. We believe that had we been in the proper frame of mind we could have gotten more out of the course. But how can a man be in the proper state mentally when he is undergoing the tortures of the straight jacket of suffering the discomforts of a chained convict? We don't know the reason why, when the Law College is running at a profit, the students could not at least be made comfortable enough to enable them to listen to their professors without having to shift their attention to the almost impossible task of keeping a note-book off the floor or balancing a case-book on one knee without jabbing the man next. We believe that better work could be done all around in more comfortable quarters.

This is a matter which would bear looking into.

eleven Seniors were recommended for the degree of Dr. of Phar.

The annual banquet was held on the fifteenth. The large dining hall at Rauscher's was well filled and decorated with the insignia proper to the Department. At the huge table arranged in the shape of a horseshoe, Professor Waggonman presided as toastmaster, his ready wit and good nature adding much to the enjoyment of the feast. It was by far the best event of its kind yet held, and served to bring the students and Faculty closer together, promoting personal interest.

For the Alumni, Dr. Kalusowski, Kebler, and Professors Bradbury and Stephens gave interesting and instructive addresses. Mr. Wm. H. Wittlesey, representing the students, made a most entertaining speech.

TEACHERS COLLEGE NOTES

MR SMALL has been appointed to represent the University at the Fourth International Congress on School Hygiene, to be held at Buffalo, August 25-30, 1913. At this Congress the subject of School Hygiene will be discussed in all its phases, under three heads: (1) "The Hygiene of School Buildings, Grounds, Material, Equipment and Up-keep"; (2) "The Hygiene of School Administration, Curriculum and Schedule"; (3) "Medical, Hygiene and Sanitary Supervision in Schools."

Class night exercises of the Senior class of Teachers College took place June 6 at the McKinley High School. Mr. Arthur Call spoke on "Privileges of the Teachers." There were several musical numbers on the program and the presentation of the portrait of the late Dean Hough was made.

The Master's Essay of Miss Katharine Buvard has been published in the Psychological Clinic. The subject is the "Progress of Repeaters."

The results of the investigation made by Miss Buvard in 1912 in the Washington Public Schools to ascertain to what extent eighth grade pupils of that year had repeated grades, which grades had been repeated and what the causes of repeating were, are given in this report in tabulated form.

The tables show that 62.5 per cent of the white pupils and 47.5 per cent of the colored were repeaters; that the causes are failure in studies, illness and physical defects.

Many other interesting facts are revealed by these complete and carefully worked-out tables.

On Tuesday, May 19, Dr. Rudiger was called to Asbury, Va., to talk on the training of teachers for Sunday School work.

So, being, the position that at present I am retaining, as my sister will be dead and I will also go with her to the funeral with her at the same day, I will oblige me to express by nonconference at the same.

"It will be the sadness of the proper expression that I make this note to you in feeling which you can enjoy, as it is.

Faculty Disapproves of Football

An effort has recently been made on the part of several of the alumni and students of the George Washington University to reestablish football in the Institution. A schedule has been made out. Contracts had been made, and all arrangements for a team completed. The news of this came rather suddenly to the attention of the University authorities and the whole matter has been repudiated.

Relying upon the statement frequently made that athletics would be resumed only on the raising of the athletic deficit, a number of public-spirited men went forward with arrangements for teams for the coming year. Their plan was to pay off all existing debts at the close of the present school year, advancing the money for that purpose in the nature of a loan. Their idea was furthermore to assume all meeting of the year. After a short responsibility for the team for next fall and personally guarantee to defray any expenses over receipts. In other words, to put football on a paying basis or stand the loss themselves. It is unfortunate that this action was taken without the consent or the authority of the President of the University. While the scheme was a good one and the men who entered into it acted according to what they considered to be the best interests of the University, still it would be a dangerous thing to allow persons to sign contracts and render the University liable for things over which the University had no control and of which they have had no knowledge. The action of the alumni in this matter has been unconditionally repudiated and the parties concerned have been instructed to that effect. What would have been the attitude of the Athletic Council and the president of the University had the plan been properly presented to them before definite action had been taken can not be conjectured. It is probable however that it would have been sanctioned.

It is unfortunate that the plan has fallen through. The men were overzealous in the matter perhaps and are certainly to blame for failing to consult with the University authorities. It seemed to them, however, beyond reason that a scheme of this nature would have been turned down. There has been much talk about the revival of athletics and the good which can come from good teams in the way of advertising and making for common interests among the students. A plan of the sort proposed whereby all the present debt of the Athletic Association could have been cleared off and no possibility of further indebtedness could have resulted would certainly have met with approval had the matter been properly presented. Football has always been a paying proposition when properly managed. Washington especially is a football town and should bring in considerable revenue to any institution putting out a creditable team. It is greatly to be regretted therefore that the alumni scheme of management and the proposition made by several public spirited alumni of the George Washington University should be discredited by rash and unscrupulous action on the part of those alumni.

It is unquestionable that the action of Admiral Stockton in this matter was well taken. The correct method had not been taken and unless correct methods are pursued at the outset, there is little guarantee that they will be continued. Athletics have failed to pay at this institution largely because of incorrect methods of management. Undergraduates have always been placed in charge who have had neither time nor experience sufficient to qualify them to handle large propositions.

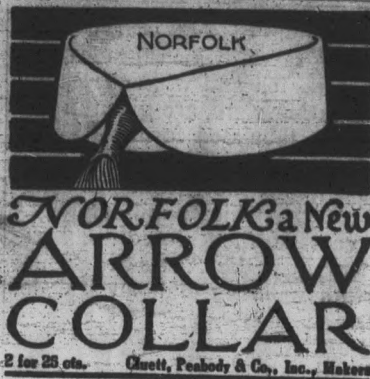

The cancelling of the football schedule is a severe blow to the followers of athletics in Washington and especially the following of the George Washington University. Not only will it reduce the number of good games to be seen next fall, but it will discourage the resumption of athletics in the future. It is an unfortunate affair throughout and will not fail to discredit the University in the sight of the followers of sport in this section.

Foot Ball Captains for Next Season

Most of the Eastern colleges have chosen the captains of next year's foot ball elevens. It might be interesting to the students to know that the captains of the "Big Four" are distributed among four different positions. Hobart A. Baker captains Princeton from halfback, Henry H. Ketcham, of Yale, from center; Lewis A. Young, of the University of Pennsylvania, from end, while if Harvard selects Storer, he will lead the team from the tackle position. The positions played by the captains are as follows: Halfback, 8; end, 7; tackle, 3; fullback, 3; center, 2; quarterback, 2. The complete list follows:

Princeton, Hobart A. H. Baker, halfback; Yale, Henry H. Ketcham, center; Pennsylvania, Lewis A. Young, end; West Point, Ben F. Hoge, end; Brown, Davis E. Henry, fullback; Carlisle, Gus Welch, quarterback; Dartmouth, W. T. Englehorn, fullback; Swarthmore, Maurice Lutz, halfback; Haverford, Paul Sangree, halfback; Lehigh, George P. Flick, halfback; Holy Cross, Wilfred J. Metovie, end; Colgate, Fred A. Patterson, center; Trinity, Peter P. Lawler, halfback; Williams, Alfred Vinal, end; Lafayette, William Wagenhurst, tackle; Pittsburgh, John H. Wagner, end; Bowdoin, Robert F. Weatherill, halfback; Tufts, William J. Bennett, tackle; Syracuse, Martin J. Hilfinger, halfback; W. and J., Russell Godwin, quarterback; Vermont, W. E. Whalen, tackle; Wesleyan, Richard Eustis, end; Bates, John H. Danahy, end; Amherst, Walter H. McGay, fullback; Bucknell, William Keiser, halfback.
